

MENTAL HEALTH

Mental health issues are real (impacting how we think, feel, and act), common (affecting nearly 1 in 5 American adults), and treatable (early detection and appropriate care can prevent worsening/promote recovery), but there's often a stigma in talking about them. What if we did talk about mental health? We could better understand how mental health relates to overall well-being, and how we can take care of it.

Mental health condition fast facts:

- A mental health condition is a disabling illness that causes thinking, mood, or behavior changes that disrupt daily living.
- Anxiety (feeling frightened, distressed and uneasy for no apparent reason) and depression (severe sadness and/or loss of interest that decreases an ability to function) are the most common mental health conditions (especially among women). Learn more about conditions at the National Alliance on Mental Illness (nami.org).
- Mental health conditions can affect anyone, and no two people will experience a mental health condition in the same way.

Warning signs of a mental health condition:

Protecting mental health:

Stress management:

Helps reduce the symptoms of mental illness and promotes resilience (protection from future problems). Find time every day to do something that brings you joy.

Building strong support systems:

People to talk to, get advice from and share experiences with help ease stress, boost mood, and decrease loneliness. Anyone who is trustworthy and makes you feel comfortable and valued is a support person. Join a new group or volunteer to build your system.

Physical health:

Enough sleep, Vitamin D, regular health visits, physical activity, and eating well have benefits for mental health too!

Seeking help:

It's OK to reach out for help to be at your mental best. Connect with your primary provider, a psychiatrist, psychologist, therapist or counselor.
